

How are the Current Witch-demonology Practices Leading Christians Astray?

Sixbert SANGWA • June 05, 2024

In recent years, there has been a growing fascination with the occult and supernatural, including the study of "witchdemonology" - the beliefs and practices surrounding witches and their alleged demonic associations. Concerningly, this has extended to some ministers and church leaders claiming to possess occult powers to perform miracles and attract large followings. As Christians, it is important for us to carefully examine such topics through the lens of Scripture and sound theological reasoning.

The Bible clearly condemns the practices of witchcraft, sorcery, and the occult. Passages such as Deuteronomy 18:10-12 warn against "anyone who practices divination or tells fortunes or interprets omens, or a sorcerer or a charmer or a medium or a necromancer or one who inquires of the dead." Similarly, Galatians 5:19-21 lists "sorcery" among the "works of the flesh" that are incompatible with the fruit of the Spirit.

The root issue is that witchcraft and the occult involve attempts to gain power, knowledge, and control through means other than total reliance on the one true God. As the prophet Isaiah declared, "And when they say to you, 'Inquire of the mediums and the necromancers who chirp and mutter,' should not a people inquire of their God?" (Isaiah 8:19).

Christian theologians throughout history have consistently warned against the dangers of the occult. For example, the renowned 16th-century Reformer John Calvin wrote, "Sorceries, divinations, enchantments, and all other curious arts, by which men, out of a foolish credulity, seek vain and deceitful responses, are to be banished from the Christian society."

Sadly, in recent times, there have been numerous instances of ministers and church leaders claiming to possess occult powers, allegedly performing supernatural feats, and attracting large followings. These individuals often present themselves as anointed spiritual leaders, sometimes even being referred to as "Father" or "Mammy" by their devoted followers. However, as the Apostle Paul reminds us, "even Satan disguises himself as an angel of light" (2 Corinthians 11:14). We must be vigilant against any form of spiritual deception, no matter how impressive or alluring it may appear.

Many of these church leaders have acquired their alleged powers through various occult means, such as making pacts with demonic entities, engaging in rituals and divination, or tapping into dark spiritual forces. Under the guise of performing miracles, healings, and prophecies, they have managed to ensnare vulnerable individuals who are desperate for spiritual guidance and deliverance. Their followers, often blinded by the apparent supernatural manifestations, find it increasingly difficult to step back and question the legitimacy of these powers.

Notably, some of these ministers operate under the guise of "deliverance ministries," claiming to combat evil influences or expel demons believed to affect individuals or communities. However, in reality, these so-called "deliverance" practices often involve the introduction of evil spirits or demons into people's lives, further exacerbating their spiritual bondage. This deception is particularly insidious, as it exploits the genuine need for spiritual freedom and restoration that many individuals seek.

Furthermore, these satanically empowered ministers are adept at divination under the guise of prophecy. They make people fall in love with worldly materials rather than focusing on spiritual matters. Their messages often appeal to the desires of the flesh, drawing people away from the true pursuit of holiness and the Kingdom of God.

Ultimately, the Bible makes it clear that the spiritual realm is dominated by two powerful forces - the sovereign, loving God on one side, and the fallen, deceptive powers of Satan and his demonic hosts on the other. As the Apostle Paul warns, "we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the cosmic powers over this present darkness, against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly places" (Ephesians 6:12).

Christians must be on guard against any involvement in the occult, including witchcraft and demonology, lest we open ourselves up to dark spiritual influences. Instead, we are called to "put on the whole armor of God" (Ephesians 6:11) and to "submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you" (James 4:7).

In conclusion, the study of witchcraft and demonic powers, even when claimed by certain ministers, is fundamentally incompatible with the Christian faith. As followers of Christ, we are to "have nothing to do with the fruitless deeds of darkness, but rather expose them" (Ephesians 5:11). Let us remain steadfast in our devotion to the one true God, the source of all wisdom, power, and salvation, and be vigilant against any form of spiritual deception that seeks to lead us astray.
